

The Gülen movement will be discussed at the Arab League following similar sessions held at the Russian Parliament, the European Parliament and the British House of Lords.

Leading academics from various countries will discuss the role of movements in the Muslim world and the experiences of the Gülen movement at Arab League headquarters in Cairo. The conference, jointly held by Cairo University's economic and political science faculty, Academic Studies and the Internet Foundation from Turkey, and Hira magazine, will start Oct. 19 and last for three days.

Read the full story.

From the Conference:

Gülen movement has no political agenda, says expert.